Earn a Bachelor or Master of Science Degree (BS/MS) in Intelligence Management at Henley-Putnam, a Leader in Intelligence Studies Education

Intelligence studies refer to the different elements or functions of intelligence operations: collection, analysis, counterintelligence and covert action. More specifically:

Intelligence studies encompass the art and science of how intelligence professionals employ analytic and operational tradecraft to achieve their goals and objectives.

The overarching purpose of intelligence is to collect and analyze information that is relevant to ever-changing national security requirements - intelligence studies help to ensure that the people and processes involved in these efforts are effective and germane.

The US Intelligence Community and related federal law enforcement agencies are in need of experts in analytic tradecraft - individuals who have a broad understanding of the many threats facing our nation from terrorists and other belligerent state and non-state actors.

Henley-Putnam University provides a highly specialized education experience through its Bachelor's and Master's Degree programs in Intelligence Management.
