Koret-Taube Task Force on National Security and Law

The National Security and Law Task Force examines the rule of law, the laws of war, and American constitutional law with a view to making proposals that strike an optimal balance between individual freedom and the vigorous defense of the nation against terrorists both abroad and at home. The task force's focus is the rule of law and its role in Western civilization, as well as the roles of international law and organizations, the laws of war, and U.S. criminal law. Those goals will be accomplished by systematically studying the constellation of issues—social, economic, and political—on which striking a balance depends.

Peter Berkowitz serves as chair of the National Security and Law Task Force.

The Debate Over U.S. Libya Intervention

by Matthew Waxman (member of the Task Force on National Security and Law)

With the UN Security Council-authorized military strikes on Libya in full swing, legal debate in the United States is focused on whether, as a matter of U.S. constitutional law, the president may unilaterally order U.S. forces to participate in those operations without going to Congress for permission...

The Legal Reason Why the Obama Administration Won't Call the Libya Action "War"

by Jack Goldsmith (member of the Task Force on National Security and Law)

Critics are starting to swarm around the Obama administration's increasingly unintuitive claim – in the sixth day of what the New York Times now describes as "ferocious" air strikes on ground forces, tanks, and artillery – that the intervention in Libya is not "war..."
