FBI releases the "Medburg Investigation" Files

In March 1971, a anti-war group that called themselves, "The Citizens Committee to Investigate the FBI" broke into a FBI Office in Media, PA. The group liberated thousands of FBI documents which revealed the FBI's civil liberties violations, which were detailed in the COINTELPRO files. Needless to say this enraged the FBI and a widespread investigation was launched code named "Medburg", to determine who broke into their offices, while the FBI found created many suspects, no one has ever been prosecuted for the break-in. The files are broken into four sections due to the file sizes.

FBI wanted to investigate Nobel Prize Winner Dr. Felix Bloch

The two documents make it clear the FBI wanted to investigate Dr. Felix Bloch simply because he received some funds from a bank in Switzerland. Dr. Bloch met all the criteria to be spied on by the FBI.

1. Intelligent
2. Foreign
3. Jewish

If you add those three factors together, it simple adds up to an unfounded FBI espionage investigation. It's not so far fetched to imagine that those criteria are still in effect today. In the case of Dr. Bloch it would appear that the only thing that saved him from having his personal and professional life completely destroyed by the FBI was a shortage of FBI personnel.

The FBI finally releases the FBI's FOIA/Privacy Act Reference Books via a FOIA request.

CIA - CK-ABSORB, Cryptocomb received a "Glomar Response" regarding the CIA operation "CK-ABSORB". This operation was revealed to Peter Earley by Aldrich Ames. CK-ABSORB was a $60 million covert project where the CIA filled a cargo container on a train going west on the TransSiberian railroad with highly sensitive electronic sensors that were supposed to take readings of Soviet warheads that were being shipped by rail eastward on the same train line. The project never produced any useful information because Ames tipped off the Soviets before it was fully developed.

Cryptocomb is proud to announce the publication of over 10GB’s of documents and taped interviews journalist/author Douglas Valentine conducted with more than a dozen CIA and military officers while researching his book The Phoenix Program. The original interviews were recorded in the late 1980s on magnetic tape and, with the help of several volunteers, subsequently converted onto CD’s twenty years later. Advances in technology now make it possible to post the interviews on Cryptocomb for everyone to hear. The Phoenix Program, notably, is the template for the targeted killings in the war on terror, and the interviews are invaluable tools for learning about the men who were instrumental in its development and prosecution.

Cryptocomb has discovered that Ann Foley (Illegal Russian Spy) was a Stratfor Member. She used her real russian name “Elena Vavilova” (Stupid Move) in her registration, and used her cover name (Ann Foley) as her billing name.

Her Stratfor password was “heathfield”. Her email address was/is annfoleysvp@hotmail.com

Twin Goals and the Espionage Challenge

One of the Russian operatives, Don Heathfield, once approached a STRATFOR employee in a series of five meetings. There appeared to be no goal of recruitment; rather, the Russian operative tried to get the STRATFOR employee to try out software he said his company had developed. We suspect that had this been done, our servers would be outputting to Moscow.

We did not know at the time who he was. (We have since reported the incident to the FBI, but these folks were everywhere, and we were one among many.)

Thus, the group apparently included a man using software sales as cover — or as we suspect, as a way to intrude on computers. As discussed, the group also included talent scouts. We would guess that Anna Chapman was brought in as part of the recruitment phase of talent scouting. No one at STRATFOR ever had a chance to meet her, having apparently faked the first screening.

It will be extremely interesting to read the email correspondence between Don Heathfield and this “Stratfor Employee”. I wonder if Stratfor attempted to “Flip Him”? There will be of course email chatter between Stratfor and the FBI in regards to Don Heathfield, maybe the FBI asked Stratfor to attempt to “Flip Him”. Now that the Stratfor emails are in the wild, I guess everyone will find out soon.
