Tor: Sponsors

The Tor Project's diversity of users means we have a diversity of funding sources too — and we're eager to diversify even further! Our sponsorships are divided into levels based on total funding received (as of 2012):

Magnoliophyta (over $1 million)
- Broadcasting Board of Governors (2006-2012)
- SRI International (2011-2012)

Liliopsida (up to $1 million)
- Sida - Swedish International Development Cooperation Agency (2010-2012)

Asparagales (up to $500k)
- Internews Europe (2006-2008)
- National Science Foundation via Drexel University (2009-2011)
- National Science Foundation via Georgia Tech and Princeton University (2012-2012)
- The Knight Foundation (2012-2012)
- Radio Free Asia (2012-2012)

Alliaceae (up to $250k)
- You or your organization?

Allium (up to $125k)
- NLnet Foundation (2008-2009)
- Naval Research Laboratory (2006-2010)
- National Science Foundation via Rice University (2006-2007)

Allium cepa (up to $75k)
- More than 4,300 personal donations from individuals like you (2006-2012)
- Access Now (2012-2012)
- Google (2008-2009)
- Torfox (2009)
- Shinjiru Technology (2009-2011)
- National Christian Foundation (2010-2012)

Past sponsors
We greatly appreciate the support provided by our past sponsors in keeping the pre-501(c)(3) Tor Project progressing through our ambitious goals:

- DARPA and ONR via Naval Research Laboratory (2001-2006)
- Cyber-TA project (2006-2008)
- Bell Security Solutions Inc (2006)
- Omidyar Network Enzyme Grant (2006)
- NSF via Rice University (2006-2007)

Thank you to all the people and groups who have made Tor possible so far, and thank you especially to the individual volunteers who have made non-financial contributions: coding, testing, documenting, educating, researching, and running the relays that make up the Tor network.
