In a regulatory filing in August, as the bank grappled with a breach, JPMorgan said its board and audit committee “are regularly apprised” of significant cybersecurity events.

JPMorgan Chase relayed new details of a hacking attack in October. Other disclosures have been more subtle. In a regulatory filing in August, as the bank grappled with the breach, JPMorgan said its board and audit committee “are regularly apprised” of significant cybersecurity events. That language did not appear in an earlier regulatory filing from 2013 or in an earlier quarterly report.