23 I. INTRODUCTION

24 Members of the news media – the San Francisco Chronicle, Los Angeles Times, 25 Associated Press, San Jose Mercury News, and Bloomberg News – file this brief in opposition to 26 defendant AT&T’s attempt to seal documents and briefs and close the hearing on its request. A 27 heavy burden rests upon those who would either close the courtroom or seal documents, and 28 AT&T’s conclusory assertions of harm come nowhere close to meeting that burden. That burden

1 is even heavier when, as here, a matter of national interest is at stake and the conduct of the 2 government is being challenged. AT&T's Motion to File Documents Under Seal, and its last-3 minute request to close the courtroom, should be denied.

4 As Local Rule 79-5's Commentary explains, "As a public forum, the Court will only 5 entertain requests to seal that establish good cause and are narrowly tailored to seal only the 6 particular information that is genuinely privileged or protectable as a trade secret or otherwise
7 has a compelling need for confidentiality. Documents may not be filed under seal pursuant to 8 blanket protective orders covering multiple documents."

9 The burden imposed on a party seeking to seal documents, under Local Rule 79-5, U.S.
10 Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit precedent, is a very heavy one, and likewise the burden rests
11 upon those attempting to show "trade secrets" as a justification for sealing documents. Foltz v.
12 State Farm Ins. Co., 331 F.3d 1122, 1135 (9th Cir. 2003) [in the 9th Circuit, "we start with a 13 strong presumption in favor of access to court records"]; In re Providian Credit Card Cases, 96
14 Cal.App.4th 292, 301 (2002). Likewise, this Court need not accept declarations from the parties 15 or third parties as "dispositive," ibid., and it can reject declarations as "conclusionary and 16 lacking in helpful specifics." Id. at 305. Mere assertions that closure or sealing serves a 17 "compelling interest" do not suffice; specific evidentiary facts are required. Oregonian
18 Publishing Co. v. District Court, 920 F.2d 1462, 1467 (9th Cir. 1990) [government failed to make 19 evidentiary record of facts justifying closure].

20 II. THE MEDIA HAVE STANDING TO MOVE TO UNSEAL RECORDS, TO 21 OPPOSE SEALING REQUESTS AND TO OPPOSE CLOSURE. LEAVE TO 22 INTERVENE SHOULD BE GRANTED.

23 As the Supreme Court held in Globe Newspapers Co. v. Superior Court, 457 U.S. 596, 24 609 n. 25 (1982), "representatives of the press and general public must be given an opportunity
25 to be heard on the question of their exclusion." In accordance with the Supreme Court's 26 pronouncement, courts permit the media to appear in criminal and civil cases in which they are 27 not parties for the purpose of challenging requests or orders to seal judicial records. See, e.g.,
28 San Jose Mercury News v. U.S. District Court, 187 F.3d 1096, 1101; NBC Subsidiary (KNBC-

1 TV), Inc. v. Superior Court, 20 Cal.4th 1178, 1217 & n. 36 (1999). Judge King of the Central 2 District of California eloquently explained the benefits of press intervention in State of 3 California ex rel. Lockyer v. Safeway, 355 F. Supp. 2d 1111, 1124 (C.D. Cal. 2005), in the 4 course of unsealing documents filed in connection with a Motion for Summary Judgment in an 5 antitrust case: “the press has historically served as a monitor of both the State and the courts,
6 and it plays a vital role in informing the citizenry on the actions of its government institutions.”
7 Those words are especially apt here in a case challenging the conduct of the government. Thus,
8 the press has standing to challenge an order sealing or an attempt to file records under seal.

9 III. THE PRESS AND THE PUBLIC HAVE AN EXPRESS RIGHT OF ACCESS TO 10 COURT PAPERS.

11 A. Records Filed in a Judicial Proceeding Are Presumptively Public, and May 12 Not Be Sealed Unless there Is a Compelling Need to Do So.

13 The United States Supreme Court has held that the First Amendment guarantees the press
14 and the public the right to attend trials and pre-trial proceedings. Richmond Newspapers, Inc. v.
15 Virginia, 448 U.S. 555, 580 (1980); Globe Newspaper Co. v. Superior Court, 457 U.S. 596
16 (1982); Press-Enterprise Co. v. Superior Court, 464 U.S. 501 (1984); Press-Enterprise Co. v.
17 Superior Court, 478 U.S. 1, 10 (1986). This First Amendment guarantee applies to judicial 18 records as well as proceedings. Foltz, supra, 331 F.3d at 1135.

19 The Ninth Circuit and California courts have consistently rejected “trade secret” claims 20 advanced by corporate defendants who sought to seal documents. Foltz, supra, 331 F.3d at 21 1137; In Re Providian Credit Card Cases, 96 Cal.App.4th 292 (2001); see Universal City
22 Studios, Inc. v. Superior Court (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 1273, 1275 [denying motion to seal
23 settlement agreement]; Huffy Corporation v. Superior Court, 112 Cal.App.4th 97, 105-10 (2003) 24 [denying motion to seal settlement agreement, sources of payments to settle cases, admissions of 25 law violations, identities of witnesses, and identities of parties named by government as violating 26 pollution laws]. These cases mandate unsealing here.

27 The Third Circuit applied the presumptive right of access to material submitted in 28 connection with a motion to dismiss and a motion for preliminary injunction – the motion in

1 connection with which the Klein Declaration and exhibits were filed – in Leucadia, Inc. v.
2 Applied Extrusion Technologies, Inc., 998 F.2d 157, 164. The Court concluded: “We believe 3 that our earlier decisions and those in other courts lead ineluctably to the conclusion that there is 4 a presumptive right of public access to pretrial motions of a nondiscovery nature, whether 5 preliminary or dispositive, and the material filed in connection therewith.” The Court went on to 6 explain that those asserting trade secrets bear the burden of justifying the confidentiality of each 7 and every document they seek to seal and must make a showing based upon “current evidence to 8 show how public dissemination of the pertinent materials now would cause the competitive harm
9 [they] claim.” (Id. at 166-67.) We respectfully submit that exhibits allegedly taken by Mr. Klein
10 in 2004 cannot serve as “current evidence” of alleged competitive harm to AT&T.<sup>1</sup>

11 B. The Public and the Press are Entitled to Prompt Access to the Records.

12 The sealing of court records cannot be premised on delaying rather than denying access.
13 Time is of the essence to effective news coverage. A “total restraint on the public’s first 14 amendment right of access [is prohibited] even though the restraint is limited in time.”
15 Associated Press v. United States District Court., 705 F.2d 1143, 1147 (9th Cir. 1983). “Loss of 16 First Amendment freedoms, even for minimal periods of time, unquestionably constitutes 17 irreparable injury.” Elrod v. Burns, 427 U.S. 347, 373 (1976). Accord Paradise Hills Associates
18 v. Procel, 235 Cal.App.3d 1528, 1538 (1991) (citation omitted) (“[T]he deprivation of first 19 amendment rights for even minimal periods constitutes irreparable harm in the context of an 20 action for injunctive relief.”).

21 The United States Supreme Court and the other federal courts have consistently 22 emphasized the importance of contemporaneous access to judicial proceedings and records. See, 23 e.g., Nebraska Press Assn. v. Stuart, 427 U.S. 539, 561 (1976) (“As a practical matter, moreover,
25

---

26
27 <sup>1</sup> The Court in Barr Laboratories, Inc. v. KOS Pharmaceuticals, 362 F. Supp. 2d 421
28 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) denied a motion to close the courtroom during a hearing on a preliminary injunction motion involving alleged trade secrets.

1 the element of time is not unimportant if press coverage is to fulfill its traditional function of 2 bringing news to the public promptly”).

3 This case is unquestionably of great public interest. It alleges misconduct by the 4 government and also challenges the conduct of a large corporate entity.

5 On the other hand, no presumption of prejudice to the parties’ interests may be indulged.
6 Brian W. v. Superior Court, 20 Cal.3d 618, 625 (1978). All papers should be unsealed.

7 C. None of the Findings Required by the Case Law and the First Amendment
8 Can Be Made Here. The Public and Press Are Entitled to Full Access to all 9 Documents Filed With the Court.

10 Even when a criminal defendant’s constitutional right to a fair trial is at issue, the 11 Supreme Court has held that proceedings cannot be closed to the public unless “there is a 12 substantial probability that the defendant’s right to a fair trial will be prejudiced by publicity that 13 closure would prevent and, second, reasonable alternatives to closure cannot adequately protect 14 the defendant’s fair trial rights.” Press-Enterprise, supra, 478 U.S. at 14.

15 1. There Is No Compelling Interest Overcoming Public Right of Access.

16 The commentary to Local Rule 79-5 requires a “compelling” interest to seal an exhibit or 17 record. This finding cannot be made here. The public and the press which serves that public are 18 entitled to know the details about the allegations and evidence in this important case.

19 AT&T has designated, in conclusory fashion, documents as confidential. But saying it 20 doesn’t make it so. These designations are, like the declarations at issue in the Providian case,
21 “conclusionary and lacking in helpful specifics.” (Providian, supra, 96 Cal.App.4th at 305.)

22 Rather, it seems that some or all of the documents “were not trade secrets because they 23 had been disclosed to the public.” (Providian, supra, 96 Cal.App.4th at 304-05.) As the 24 Providian Court concluded, “it is...reasonable to infer from the declarations – and we do, in 25 support of the trial court’s order [citation omitted] – that the scripts, if not all at once, then at 26 least in piecemeal fashion, were disclosed to defendants’ customers. They have no other 27 purpose. The scripts are sales pitches, and once they have been used, sales pitches are not 28 treated as trade secrets.” (Id. at 305.)

1 The Providian holding is fully applicable here, where it appears that the alleged 2 “confidential” information AT&T seeks to seal is in fact information which has been disclosed,
3 or is merely general business information and not true “trade secrets.”

4 The Supreme Court has consistently frowned upon secrecy and sealed records. “People
5 in an open society do not demand infallibility from their institutions, but it is difficult for them to 6 accept what they are prohibited from observing.” Richmond Newspapers, supra, 448 U.S. 555, 7 572. Indeed, even when military secrets have been at risk of disclosure, the Court has refused to 8 allow secrecy to prevail. See, e.g., New York Times v. United States [Pentagon Papers], 403 U.S.
9 713. If the possible disclosure of top-secret military plans does not justify secrecy, then the 10 alleged trade secrets of AT&T should not be sealed either.

11 2. No Prejudice If Records Are Unsealed.

12 Press-Enterprise requires a “substantial probability” of prejudice to fair trial rights to 13 deny access. Again, no such finding can be made. First, no party has shown any “overriding 14 interest” in sealing papers. In any event, even if there were an “overriding interest” supporting 15 secrecy, no showing of prejudice has been made. AT&T has failed to make any showing of 16 competitive injury or other harm to its interests.

17 As the California Supreme Court observed in NBC Subsidiary, “[a]n individual or 18 corporate entity involved as a party to a civil case is entitled to a fair trial, not a private one.”
19 20 Cal.4th at 1211.

20 3. The Proposed Sealing Is Not Narrowly Tailored.

21 Local Rule 79-5(b), in accordance with First Amendment principles, requires that any 22 proposed sealing be narrowly tailored. Press-Enterprise, supra, 478 U.S. at 15. Even if a party 23 to this action could have justified sealing any records – and no such showing has been or could 24 be made – the sealing in this case is grossly overbroad. AT&T seeks to seal its entire brief and 25 apparently has not filed a public redacted version of certain documents as required by Local Rule 26 79-5(b).

1           Unfortunately, the only thing “narrowly tailored” about the sealing requested in this case
2 may be the ability of the public to understand what is happening in this dispute.

3                           4.       Less Restrictive Means.

4           The Court must also consider alternatives to sealing. Press-Enterprise, 478 U.S. at 15.
5 Local Rule 79-5(b), for example, sets forth that even when some sealing may be justified – and 6 again, no such finding can be made – the court should, “if practicable,” direct sealing of “only 7 those documents, pages, or, if practicable, those portions of documents or pages, which contain 8 the information requiring confidentiality. All other portions of such documents shall be included
9 in the public file.” This is simple recognition that public access is the rule, not the exception.
10 Foltz, supra, 331 F.3d at 1137; San Jose Mercury News, supra, 187 F.3d at 1102. The burden
11 rests upon those who would deny public access to establish compelling reasons why records 12 should be made private. There are no compelling reasons to deny access to the documents in 13 question. They should be unsealed.<sup>2</sup>

17 General Motors, 307 F.3d 1206 (9th Cir. 2002). Those cases are readily distinguishable. In 18 Nixon, supra, 435 U.S. 589, 597, the Supreme Court first recognized, “It is clear that the courts
19 of this country recognize a general right to inspect and copy public records and documents, 20 including judicial records and documents.” The Court based its ruling that the President’s 21 interest in not releasing Watergate tapes outweighed the media’s interest on a “unique element”
22 (Id. at 603) – the fact that the media had an alternative means of access under the Presidential 23 Recordings and Materials Preservation Act, 88 Stats. 1695. No such alternative means of access 24 exists here, and thus Nixon – decided before Richmond Newspapers and Press Enterprise – is 25 easily distinguishable. Moreover, in that case the question was not access per se but whether 26 copies of the tapes must be made available for copying and sale. (Id. at 609.) “There [was] no 27 question of a truncated flow of information to the public.” (Ibid.) In Phillips, the issue was 28 whether to unseal information produced by GM under a protective order during discovery. Here, on the other hand, AT&T seeks to seal a document which had not been the subject of a protective order and which has been filed in connection with an important motion. The Ninth Circuit’s decision in Foltz is thus the applicable precedent. (Foltz, supra, 331 F.3d at 1136 [presumption of access not rebutted where documents subject to a protective order are filed under seal as attachments to a dispositive motion]; see also Cal. Rules of Court 243.1 Advisory Committee Comment [sealed records rules don’t apply to discovery motions but do apply to documents submitted to court as basis for adjudication]. As Foltz explains, “when discovery material is filed with the court, its status changes.” (331 F.3d at 1134.)

1           D.     The Parties Have Not Followed Procedural Prerequisites for Sealing.

2           The parties have also not followed the procedural prerequisites for sealing documents.
 3           As the Ninth Circuit has explained, “if a court contemplates sealing a document or transcript, it
 4           must provide sufficient notice to the public and press and afford them the opportunity to object
 5           or offer alternatives...a hearing on the objections must be held as soon as possible.” Phoenix
 6           Newspapers v. District Court, 156 F.3d 940, 949 (9th Cir. 1998). AT&T’s overbroad designation
 7           of documents as confidential frustrates the ability of the press and public to be heard on the 8           question of sealing.

9           IV.    NATIONAL SECURITY INTERESTS DO NOT JUSTIFY CLOSURE OR 10           SEALING.

11           Any argument for closure of hearings or sealing of documents based upon national 12           security should also be rejected. In Detroit Free Press v. Ashcroft, 303 F.3d 681 (6th Cir. 2002),
 13           the Court affirmed a ruling granting a public right of access to deportation hearings. The Court
 14           took note of arguments based upon national security: “No one will ever forget the egregious, 15           deplorable, and despicable terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. These were cowardly acts.
 16           In response, our government launched an extensive investigation into the attacks, future threats, 17           conspiracies, and attempts to come. As part of this effort, immigration laws are prosecuted with 18           increased vigor.” (Id. at 682.) But the Court rejected the argument that the Executive Branch’s 19           actions could be placed beyond public scrutiny: “Democracies die behind closed doors. The 20           First Amendment, through a free press, protects the people’s right to know that their government
 21           acts fairly, lawfully, and accurately in deportation proceedings. When government begins
 22           closing doors, it selectively controls information rightfully belonging to the people. Selective 23           information is misinformation. The Framers of the First Amendment ‘did not trust any 24           government to separate the true from the false for us.’” (Id. at 683, emphasis added.)
 25           Accordingly, the Court found blanket closure of deportation hearings unconstitutional.<sup>3</sup>

26
 27           <sup>3</sup>           In North Jersey Media Group v. Ashcroft, 308 F.3d 198, 201, the Third Circuit
 28           disagreed with the Sixth Circuit’s decision in Detroit Free Press, but the Third Circuit’s decision was based largely on its conclusion that “the tradition of openness of deportation proceedings

1 Detroit Free Press strongly militates against closure. Likewise, in New York Times v.
2 United States, supra, 403 U.S. 713, the “Pentagon Papers” case, the Supreme Court found that 3 the national security interests proffered did not justify a prior restraint against publication of the 4 Pentagon Papers. National security interests do not justify either closure or sealing in this case.

5 V. CONCLUSION

6 This case involves a significant, high-profile case challenging the conduct of the 7 government and the Bay Area’s largest telecommunications provider. None of the combatants –
8 the government, AT&T or plaintiff – can expect to have it resolved out of the public eye, and 9 neither the parties nor any third parties have justified sealing of any documents. The Motion to 10 Seal should be denied and all hearings in the matter should be open to the public.
